Latest Architectural Designs for United States Marshals Museum Revealed

FORT SMITH, Ark. (June 28, 2018) – The United States Marshals Museum announced today significantly enhanced architectural renderings and designs. Designed by Polk Stanley Wilcox Architects, based out of Little Rock and Fayetteville, the images showcase the beauty of what will be the iconic Mary Carleton and Robert A. Young III building.

“This building will be a one-of-a-kind destination for current and future generations of Arkansas residents and national visitors alike,” said Reese Rowland of Polk Stanley Wilcox Architects. “Everyone involved in this project is very passionate about it and we are excited to share this up-to-date artwork ahead of construction starting this summer.”

The Museum will feature a unique exterior with a modified star-shaped design signifying the star badge worn by courageous U.S. Marshals. Inside, five immersive galleries – Defining Marshals, The Campfire: Stories Under the Stars, Frontier Marshals, A Changing Nation, and Modern Marshals - will educate guests about the critical, ever-evolving role the Marshals have played in upholding the Rule of Law, driven by justice, integrity and service.

The Museum’s National Learning Center will combine the Museum experience with education programming focused on the Constitution, the Rule of Law and civic literacy. It will engage local and national audiences using a variety of resources.

“Our goal is not only to educate our community, but also to show them the power of making a real impact in the world in which we live,” said Cole Goodman, chairman of the USMM board.

Guests will also get to pay tribute to the more than 350 Marshals killed in the line of duty since 1789 by visiting the Samuel M. Sicard Hall of Honor.

The Museum is scheduled to open in the fall of 2019.

About the United States Marshals Museum

The future United States Marshals Museum will be a national Museum located on the riverfront in Fort Smith, Ark. Opening in the fall of 2019, the United States Marshals Museum will tell the story of our nation’s oldest federal law enforcement agency from its establishment by President George Washington through current day. The Museum will honor the sacrifice of Marshals killed in the line of duty, as well as those who continue to place their lives in harm’s way, as they enforce the Constitution.
